WATER CONSERVATION

Although the earth is rich in water, only one percent is liquid fresh water, the form we require for our highest priority needs. The demands on this liquid fresh water are growing, and many scientists feel that a future shortage of fresh water will be eminent. Water conservation and management emphasizes water quality protection, a growing area of employment and environmental concern. Water conservation and management encompasses the policies, strategies and activities made to manage water as a sustainable resource, to protect the water environment, and to meet current and future human demand. Population, household size, and growth and affluence all affect how much water is used. Factors such as climate change will increase pressures on natural water resources especially in industrial and agriculture.

the break, technical sessions started and the participants were allotted into different groups and different subjects were provided on which they had to discuss. The discussion was based on the ways to link classroom study to society with paper support. The session was divided into different parts where emphasis was given on policy formation, spreading awareness about these schemes. Speakers emphasised about there being a dire need for change in educational policies, methodologies of teaching and assessment. They were of the opinion that the educational policies should follow a bottom up approach rather than a Top-down approach. Where the problems are dealt with at the grass root level and the policies reflect these deficiencies and work towards their eradication. NIF - National Innovation Foundation has made it's mission to try and bring about a difference in our education policies and methods. NIF has a concept of "Shodha Yatra" where teams are deployed to villages to find out ways of innovative techniques to improve lifestyle and education. Education should not only be placement oriented but should emphasis on overall development . Importance should be paid on obtaining life skills. Our assessment methods should be revisited. The Concept of "Nai Talim" is still in a nascent stage but gaining fast popularity. Giving academic place to ' Jugad' in education was one of the major highlight of the workshop. ACTIVITY: Two Week faculty development program "Transition from Blackboard to Broadband an Online training in Online Teaching"

Date: 27th July 2020 tom 8th August 2020

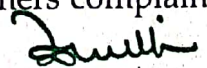

The pandemic COVID-19 challenged the traditional system of Education. The uncertainties emanating from this contagion were so grave that the governments and the educational organizations and institutions were unable to avoid closure of educational institutions.

In India, all educational institutions were closed since March 24th, 2020 and even examinations were held due to the spread of the contagion. After a few days of closure, many educational institutions initiated a rapid but unplanned move to impart online teaching and learning.

Online teaching was undoubtedly a good step to bridge the void caused by the pandemic in teaching-learning processes and programmes in the country. However, it had its prerequisites to make it effective and successful.

Internal Quality Assurance Cell (IQAC), Dev Samaj College of Education, Chandigarh conducted an online survey during these trying circumstances amid the coronavirus pandemic. It comprised a total sample size of 3550 teachers from different schools. The survey was aimed to study the challenges faced by teachers during online teaching amid COVID-19. It also sought inputs/recommendations from teachers to make online teaching more result-oriented.

The results of the study revealed that 90.2% of teachers were taking online classes for the first time. It was also reported that there was a lack of in-service training in online teaching, which was perceived as a challenge by nearly 60% of the teachers. Some teachers complained

Dr. (Mrs.) Agnese Dhillon
Principal,
Dev Samaj College of Education
Sector 36-B, Chandigarh.

that they were struggling to get a hang of the technology and wanted that they should be given proper training. The study concluded that the use of digital technology in education, a major objective of the National Education Policy that had remained elusive so far, is imperative in these trying times.

In pursuit of these objectives, educational institutions were now required to take a big leap forward in developing and ensuring the digital delivery of education. It was a big challenge, to say the least, but had to be faced with a new normal way of living that the pandemic COVID-19 enforced with innumerable uncertainties and precautions.

The findings of the online survey suggest that majority of the teachers do not have formal training in developing e-content and managing online classes. Majority of the teachers were using social media apps like WhatsApp to deliver the content to the students.

In this background, two key requirements of this new normal mode of delivery education were:

Teacher Training in Online Teaching: The first and foremost requirement of new normal in education is to develop the capacity of teachers in online teacher training. They need to familiarize themselves with the use of technologies adapted in online teaching. Since the pandemic COVID-19 was here to stay for a long time, teacher training, both pre-service and in-service would need to be pursued as a regular faculty development programme.

E-content development: The State Education Departments and institutions need to prepare e-content comprehensively as complete teaching will henceforth take place either online or in a broadcasting way. The Governments may either provide standard e-content in the local language or allow the local schools to develop e-content, for which they would need to be assisted and trained to develop the capacity. For the training of teachers also, e-content needed to be prepared

Being an institution fully provided with qualified human resources, adequate infrastructure, and technical staff, Dev Samaj College of Education organized a Two Week faculty development program "Transition from Blackboard to Broadband an Online training in Online Teaching" from 27th July 2020 tom 8th August 2020 in collaboration with SCERT, Punjab for teachers working in Government schools of Punjab in Online Teaching to overcome the challenges faced by the teachers in Digital Education and to ensure quality education using digital technology, which, among other things, is imperative to train teachers in Online teaching.
